Megan reported that the CGS Graduate survey went out to 3,544 current graduate students that had been at ODU for more than one semester. They received 444 completed responses (12.5%). The level of graduate students who very satisfied or satisfied but did not go into specifics per college as they had not delved that deeply into the statistics yet. She pointed out that they were toying with the idea of creating a dashboard that would enable them to filter the data and focus on colleges and departments. She also mentioned that the university falls into the satisfied or very satisfied sectors. Megan also mentioned that if anyone were interested in seeing the report, her department would share the PowerPoint presentation. Robert asked if this survey could be repeated on an annual basis and Megan responded yes, especially since the survey excluded those who had only just begun graduate school and were in their first semester, they would be eligible to participate in next year's survey.

- CGS Survey – Bryan Porter

Bryan gave a brief overview of the CGS fund that surveys exiting master's students after completing their degree. The survey will be sent out after each graduation semester over the course of the next three years. He said that of the 513 that graduated this May, approximately 100 of them answered the survey. The purpose of the data collected is to help build curricula, meet market needs, etc. Bryan said he is working on the grant with Megan, and they have decided to survey the summer students this year as well. It is slated to go out sometime in July.

- GPD Survey – Bryan Porter

Bryan said the Graduate School was grateful for the response rate from the graduate program directors who participated in the stipend survey sent out across the colleges. He commented that the data collected would go into a report the Graduate School is compiling for the President's Office. The objective is to raise stipends for master's and doctoral students bringing the sum in the ballpark of $4 million dollars.
