- 2nd Place – Adenrele Oludiran, Ph.D. Chemistoy –Topic: “Even antibiotics need a helping hand:ole of Piscoins against Clostoidioidesiffico pathogen.
- People’s Choice – Yasir Alanazi, Ph.D. Computer Science – Topic: “Refining the face of physics: A machine learning tool to generate synthetic particle collisions.

He thanked everyone for their support of the 3MT competition. It was noted that the media exposure via university announcements, news and social media, helped make the event a great success. Also noted that the live/livestream method used for this year’s competition went very well and that it experienced no technical difficulties. Over 100 attended the virtual livestream. First place winner, Jeremiah Ammons, will represent ODU at the Council of Southern Graduate Schools in February against 15 other states and about 42 other students.

CourseLeaf Course Inventory Management (CAT) Training – Missy Barber

It was announced that Catalog training will begin and anyone responsible for updating the catalog content and would like to attend a session can register here:

degree, all of which harbor many concentrations. He noted that for those students wishing to have a second degree, the double concentration policy was created. He stated that the issue brought up before the attendees is how to handle concentrations, under umbrella degrees, attempting to make changes in admissions or other processes. The question posed was do other concentrations have to degrade?

BP – To be clear, he noted that the issue on the table was not for voting, just for open discussion. The most recent issue used as an example – an education concentration seeking to admit students post bacc as opposed to post masters. Another example - students having to know which concentration they're applying for to know if the GRE had been waived. The point of the discussion centered around the fact that some concentrations are attempt(c)8 (o)2 ,iTa20.3210 3y9 (c)3.9
